

Ali Gaul
candidate for Esquimalt Council

People of all ages are active and engaged citizens. Committees and commissions never lack for volunteers. The work is valued, respected and meaningful. Public consultation is frequent. Voter turnout is over 70 percent.

Development reflects the diverse cultures and values of the community. Small businesses are places of lively conversation. They prosper. Sports facilities, schools and parks are focal points. They foster connections and life long friendships. They are never considered “surplus to need.” Music and the arts are affordable and accessible for everyone.

Public Transit, walking and cycling are the most popular options for travel. Residential streets host more road hockey than traffic. Local food is abundant. All children have the opportunity to tend the soil. Local newsletters welcome newcomers. The stories of our history and the possibilities of our future are shared.

We have more than a sustainable city. We do more than just sustain. We thrive.
